Good morning,

Further to our previous letter last night, and difficulties with ParentMail crashing, we wish to clarify that where Key Worker children can be kept at home (due to the new variant and schools being considered as vectors of transmission') and undertake remote learning, they should do so.

It will be possible over the next few days to arrange a part-time place in school and part-time remote learning at home according to parental shift patterns, if needed. We will just need a little time to arrange this with you.

Please look out for a parent questionnaire today - specifically for key workers - to help us to plan our in-school provision. At the moment we think we have 215 key workers children. This is too many children for us to have in school at any one time, as will bring our total to 50%. If you can arrange for your child to engage in remote learning from home - please do so.

Thank you for your messages of support and positive responses - we will get through this together!
